Millennial Dating Language

- Ghosting: When people gradually stop responding to messages and then disappear on their romantic interests. The person disappears on you, stops contacting you, and essentially cuts all communication out of the blue.
- Cushioning: When a partner in a monogamous relationship still flirts with other people — so if their main relationship does not work out, there’s a backup ready.
- Orbiting: When someone ghost you, but still engages with you on social media. A flagrant orbiter might ignore your phone calls, but watch your Instagram stories. They will block you on WhatsApp but retweet your latest picture.
- Benching: Stringing the other person along with just enough effort (well-timed WhatsApps and witty texts, or small promises that never materialize into big gestures) to keep them waiting.
-Breadcrumbing: Leaving a trail of flirtatious text messages (breadcrumbs) or showing affection on social media without any intention of actually asking the person out.
- R-bombing: When you know that a person has seen your message, but hasn’t responded to it. That’s not to say you won’t ever hear from them again, but they will ignore the texts they don’t deem interesting enough.
- Instagrandstanding: When a person curates their Instagram feed with one person in mind, and specifically posts pictures that will appeal to their crush.
